

'Bloodshed will pursue you?'

Submitted by Kevin Richert on Thu, 03/26/2009 - 8:12am

I saw a mention of this on another blog this morning (hat tip to the unequivocal notion.) I had to see for myself.

I'm stunned.

Verbatim from Bryan Fischer of the Idaho Values Alliance:

You by now will have read about the plane crash in Montana which took the lives of 14 people. What you may not have read is that among the victims were members of Bud Feldkamp's family, including two of his daughters, two sons-in-law, and five grandchildren. Feldkamp, it turns out, is the owner of the nation's largest privately owned, for-profit abortion chain. His clinics perform more abortions in California even than Planned Parenthood. The plane, in another tragically ironic twist, crashed in a Roman Catholic cemetery which contains a memorial to victims of abortion, the 'Tomb of the Unborn.' Pro-lifers had prayed for years in front of his mansion, pleading with him and praying for him to repent and warning him for his children's sake that, "If you do not hate bloodshed, bloodshed will pursue you."

There's a lot I could say, but I really have nothing to add. This passage speaks volumes.